Section M - Evaluation Factors for Award

Change Clause ESC-M001Paragraph 2.4 note 2

FROM: For the down-select development phase, the Government will evaluate each Offeror's price/cost proposals for both the initial (FFP award) and follow on (down select) source selections using one of more of the proposal analysis techniques outlined in FAR 15.404 (Proposal analysis). The Government will perform a cost realism analysis on the development (i.e., cost reimbursable) segment of each proposal to determine the probable cost of performance. The Government estimate of most probably cost, not the proposed cost, will be used for purposes of evaluation to determine best value. The Government may perform cost realism analysis of the fixed-price segment of the proposal. However, while the results of this cost realism analysis may be used in performance risk assessments and responsibility determinations, they will not be used to adjust offered prices. The total cost to the Government for evaluation purposes will be derived as the sum of the following:

- a. Government estimate of most probably cost for all cost reimbursable efforts, plus any associated base fee, plus maximum proposed award fee.
- b. Proposed prices for all fixed-price efforts, including the basic award and all priced options.
